

"A heightened awareness of the complex relation between Architecture and Urban Design demands a renewed exploration of the different processes in the making of urban places. No longer is a single image able to capture the layered complexity of an Urban Landscapes's many dynamics and their operation in time. It is time to examine the role of processes, both design processes and the processes of the city itself, in the making of more meaningful Architecture and more livable Places."

CORD SIEGEL

Architect and Partner at studio 'Hauschild + Siegel Architecture', Malmö, Sweden / Hamburg, Germany

Cord founded the Swedish-German studio 'Hauschild + Siegel Architecture' in 2008. The office deals primarily with design for living and the challenge of understanding dwellings as urban-active and socially progressive building blocks. They won the Kasper Sahlén Prize in 2009 for the project 'Urban Villas', and the Sveriges Arkitekters Housing Prize in 2015 and the Svensk Betong Prize in 2016 for the 'O'hoj' housing complex.

MATTIAS KÄRRHOLM

Professor of Architecture, Lund University, Sweden

Mattias studied Architecture at Lund University where he earned a Ph.D. in Architecture. He worked as a Lecturer and Professor at Malmö University and Lund University, where he is currently a Professor of Architectural Theory at the Department of Architecture and the Built Environment. His research deals with territoriality, the use of public space, urban design, materiality, actor-network theory, society and space, and everyday life.

JENNY B. OSULDSSEN

Partner at Snøhetta, Oslo, Norway; MLArch, Professor of Landscape Architecture at Ås University, Norway; Ax:Johnson Guest Professor, Lund, Sweden

Jenny is educated as a Landscape Architect in Norway (MLArch 1991) and in the USA. She has been working at Snøhetta, where she is one of six partners, since 1995. Landscape and architecture have developed at Snøhetta into a single ideology for creating a new and emerging spirit for architectural practices, worldwide. Jenny has been a member of the SUDes team as a guest professor since 2014.

JAKOB TROLLBÄCK

Founder of The New Division, Stockholm, Sweden, and rollbäck + Company, New York, USA

Jakob is the main Architect behind the communication language for the '17 Global Goals', an ambitious and inspiring agenda for a better world by 2030. In 1999 he founded Trollbäck + Company, a creative studio that has since become a touchstone for advertisers, marketers and TV networks. With offices in Stockholm and New York, Jakob specialises in strategies and communication for sustainability.

JONNA EKHOLM

SUDes Alumni, Architect at GEHL - Making Cities for People, Copenhagen, Denmark

Jonna graduated from the Sustainable Urban Design Master's Program at LTH in Lund in 2016. During her studies she worked part-time at Liliewall Arkitekter and in 2016 she was the SUDes Ambassador for Habitat III in Quito, Ecuador. Since 2016 Jonna has worked as an Architect and Urban Designer at GEHL with a focus on urban analysis and strategic planning. She has a profound interest in global development issues and the social aspect of cities, and strives in all her work to create safe and inclusive public spaces that encourage unexpected meetings, whether in a slum area or in a local Scandinavian neighborhood.

CHRISTER LARSSON

Head of the 'New Architectural Policy' of Sweden, Town Planning Director, City of Malmö, Sweden

Christer graduated as an Architect at LTH in Lund and also studied at the Royal Academy of Fine Arts in Stockholm, Sweden. In 1998 he became Head of Department as City Architect for the City of Malmö and in 2005 he became Director of City Planning. Since 2017 he has worked as Professor of Architecture at Lund University. Christer is a Member of the Royal Engineering Academy (IVA) and Chairman of the Nordic City Network, Mindset for Nordic Urban Development. He is now appointed to be the first Riksarkitekt of Sweden.

LISA EKSTRÖM

Architect at Skälsö Arkitekter, Stockholm, Sweden

Skälsö Arkitekter was founded in the year 2010 in Visby, Gotland. Lisa studied at both KTH and London before joining Skälsö Architects in 2014, starting at the Gotland office before moving to the new Skälsö studio in Stockholm in 2016. Skälsö Arkitekter was awarded both the 'Best Young Architect' prize and the 'Villapriz' for 2017.
